FROM THE PRINCIPAL'S DESK

“We provide a holistic child-centred education to develop disciplined citizens with skill, sound awareness as demonstrated through service.” At Fairways we pride ourselves on the hard work and effort that goes into every single child in ensuring that they are able to face the challenges in the school environment and greater community.

It is important that we are ever mindful of the fact that no two children develop at the exact same pace, however, it is vital that parents do not over-protect their children. It is important for the “mommy “eagle to give her children a push to enable them to learn accountability, responsibility and to develop the other core values of integrity, loyalty and respect.

Respect, however, starts with self and children like adults need to learn to accept themselves and to forget about the ‘if only’s”

- If only I was more clever
- If only I had better skills
- If only, if only, if only……

It has been proven that if you do not appreciate and love yourselves first, you are incapable of caring for, respecting and loving others because you have nothing to give. Too often we compare ourselves with what society dictates with regards to appearance and how we think we should live and when the standards are not achieved, we spend our days living our lives with regret. We are all unique and have special talents that we often take for granted.

May the week ahead be one where we are more kind to ourselves and focus on learning to love ourselves a little more each day and in so doing, we will find it easier to respect the needs of all those with whom we come in contact.

CHESS NEWS Attendance was again a bit thin on the last Monday chess for term 1. All present were presented with four pages of “homework” exercises (to give you something to do over the holidays!) Please submit your answers when next you attend. Preferably try to work them out for yourself without first “peeking” at the solutions. I believe that Ms Pringle has our fixtures for next term, and Mrs Hallatt has arranged participation in the Leicester Road League during the third term. Have a great holiday!
